Educating the Mind, Nurturing
the Heart

At G.D. Birla Centre for Education, we believe education is about shaping confident, compassionate, and responsible individuals who are prepared for the opportunities and challenges of a rapidly evolving world.

While academic excellence remains our foundation, we place equal emphasis on emotional well-being, character, resilience, and lifelong learning.

The integration of Mental Health & Well-being into our curriculum reflects our commitment to helping students understand themselves, build healthy relationships, and develop essential life skills.

By fostering curiosity, creativity, critical thinking, and empathy within a supportive environment, we empower every learner to grow with confidence and integrity.

Together, with the partnership of parents and educators, we strive to nurture young minds that will lead with purpose, wisdom, and compassion in an ever-changing global society.

VALUE OF THE MONTH

Respect & Responsibility

Participating in school and extracurricular activities has taught me the true meaning of respect and responsibility. Teamwork, competitions, and every success or failure have helped me value others' opinions, stay sincere, punctual, and dependable. I believe leading by example through kindness, honesty, respect, and accountability inspires others more than words. As students, by choosing respect over prejudice and responsibility over excuses, we can create a positive, inclusive environment where everyone can grow.

Respect and responsibility are two important values that help us become better individuals. Respect means treating others with kindness, listening to their opinions, and valuing everyone, regardless of their differences. Responsibility means completing our duties honestly, making good choices, and accepting the consequences of our actions. As students, we show respect by being polite to our teachers and classmates, and responsibility by studying sincerely, following school rules, and completing our work on time. When we practice both respect and responsibility, we build trust, strengthen relationships, and create a happy and positive environment for everyone.

Respect and responsibility are not merely virtues—they are the twin pillars upon which true character stands. When woven together, they form an unbreakable bond of trust that sustains relationships and strengthens communities. In an age defined by speed, diversity, and digital presence, these values serve as our moral compass. Respect inspires us to listen with empathy, honour differences, and uphold the inherent dignity of every individual. Responsibility compels us to own our actions, recognise our impact, and act with integrity both offline and online. Together, they possess the transformative power to turn fragmented spaces into inclusive, supportive communities where every voice is valued, every individual feels safe, and success is shared and sustained.

FINANCIAL LITERACY

PARENTS' CORNER

I strongly believe that appreciating a child's efforts and recognising both their strengths and weaknesses are essential for helping them build a future that suits them while strengthening the parent-child bond. Children often seek acceptance from those they love most, especially their parents. However, appreciation should be balanced with constructive criticism. Excessive praise may make children complacent and stagnate in their productivity, while constant criticism can lower their confidence significantly. By encouraging their efforts and gently guiding them to improve, we parents can help our children stay motivated, continue growing, and understand that there is always room for improvement and new achievements.

The Silent Strength of Appreciation
Recognition and appreciation play an integral role in the overall development of children. When children are recognized for their efforts and achievements, they become more confident, feel valued, and are willing to take on any challenge with a positive attitude.

Positive appreciation also contributes to the development of a growth mindset, encouraging children to value perseverance and learning rather than merely focusing on success.

Additionally, appreciation supports emotional well-being by helping children develop healthy self-esteem and reducing feelings of anxiety, thereby discouraging misbehaviour.

A lack of recognition can lead to demotivation, low self-confidence, diminished self-worth, and an inability to think creatively.

How Important is Appreciation and Recognition in Motivating Children?
"The deepest principle in human nature is the craving to be appreciated."

— William James (1896)

A small encouragement can brighten a child's world, give her determination, and inspire perseverance. Psychologist Albert Bandura stressed the importance of genuine acknowledgement from 'significant adults,' which contributes to children's self-confidence, resilience, and sense of self-efficacy.

Acknowledgement not only for the 'positive result' but also for their effort helps in developing internal motivation, emotional well-being, and a love of learning throughout life.

It is impressive that this school recognises each child's effort and promotes self-confidence, compassion, resilience, and self-efficacy.

After all, appreciation plants the seeds of confidence and helps every child grow into their best, unique self.
